Chapter 1

Introduction

This work is labelled as ‘draft’ because it is a work in progress. All of the dta from the census are correct: however, the glosses of the bynames, as well as their categorization into the different types, is subject to change.

1.1 Editorial practices

Geraud in his edition added a number of acute and grave accents in accordance with French practices of his time. I have omitted accents throughout, though I have retained the ç. Likewise I have retained capitalization, spacing, and the use of hyphens as in Geraud’s edition.

Bynames

3.1 Patronymic, matronymic, & marital bynames

These bynames are formed from personal names, usually masculine but sometimes feminine. In women's names, a masculine given name used as a byname was an indication of either the woman's husband or the woman's father; in most cases, there is insufficient data to say which is the case. In men's names, a woman's given name used as a byname is almost certainly an indicator of the man's mother'.
